LEADERS BARRED FROM PRESIDENCY

By Associated Press.

Torreon, July 11.—At the conference between Carranza and Villa representatives here the plan of Guadalupe, under which the present revolution has been pending, was amended so as to prevent any military leader from becoming provisional president of Mexico.

This would eliminate Carranza, Villa, Angeles or any of the leaders now in the field as presidential possibilities. This was stated in a lengthy official statement issued by the delegates before adjourning the session.

According to the amendment of the revolutionary plan, upon assuming control of the government at Mexico City General Carranza would call at once a congress of his military leaders and members of the rank and file, who would be spoken for by one delegate to every thousand men. This body would adopt the plan for the holding of elections and a program for what policies should be put into effect by the functionaries who might be eliminated.

It was stated positively that "no

Constitutionalist chief could figure as a candidate for president or vice-president." The official statement showed that the argument had been spirited at times but it reflected a final accord of the delegates of Villa's northern division and those representing the division of the east as spokesmen for General Carranza.

At the Carranza-Villa conciliation conference at Torreon an effort to prevent General Carranza or any of the military leaders of the revolution from becoming a candidate for the presidency or vice-presidency failed to be adopted, according to a lengthy official statement issued today. The motion was made by the Villa delegates.

A motion was passed, however, demanding that the first chief, at the triumph of the revolution, should call a convention composed of delegates representing the rebel army, every thousand soldiers to be represented by one delegate selected by a committee of military chiefs to be appointed by the general of the division which would fix the date and arrange for the election.

TWO WITNESSES

Their Testimony Caused the Arrest of Mrs. Edwin Carman.

Photos by American Press Association.

The testimony of these two witnesses was largely instrumental in causing the authorities to arrest Mrs. Edwin Carman and formally charge her with killing Mrs. Louise Bailey while the latter was in Dr. Carman's office at Freeport, N. Y., on the night of Tuesday, June 30. They are Miss Madeline Carman, fourteen-year-old daughter of the accused, who contradicted several of her mother's statements, and Elwood T. Bards, who says he was an eyewitness of the tragedy and who told of seeing a woman fleeing from the murder window.

INTERESTED MEN OPPOSE THE BILLS

By Associated Press.

Washington, July 11.—The result of a referendum on the trust bills pending in Congress, conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States among its constituent members, was announced here today at the headquarters of the chamber. Some organizations refused to vote for the reason that they regarded such legislation as unnecessary at this time. Business organizations in 36 states, casting a total vote of 559, recorded their views.

The vote against attempt by statute to forbid discrimination in prices of commodities was 531 to 22. That interlocking of directorates among competitive business corporations, including railroads, should be prohibited, regardless of the size of corporations in question would constitute a violation of the Sherman act, voted 491 to 41. That there should not be an attempt to regulate the shares of stock issues by corporations engaged in interstate commerce was voted 445 to 74.

ALL LAND IN SAFETY

By Associated Press.

St. John, New Foundland, July 11.—All of the passengers of the coastal steamer Invermore, which struck on the rocks near Brig Harbor Point, on the Labrador coast, last night, were safely landed today. Messages received here from the scene of the wreck said the steamer filled rapidly after striking and was today resting on the rocks with only the top deck above the water.

GERMAN POET PASSES AWAY

By Associated Press.

Berlin, July 11.—Julius Rodenburg the German poet and author, died here today in his eighty-fourth year.

REID SAYS RATE WON'T BE REDUCED

Canton, Ohio, July 10.—Charles A. Reid, of Washington C. H., minority leader of the Lower House, called Governor Cax a political grandstander in a speech before the McKinley Club here tonight, and served notice, as he said, that the extraordinary session of the Legislature, called today, would not cut the state tax levy enough to make an appreciable difference in the amount of money to be paid into the Treasuries.

PROWLER IS STILL ABROAD ON NORTH

The unknown man who has been prowling about N. North street residences for some time is still at his old game, and within the past two weeks has been seen a number of times, but his identity still remains a mystery.

Several residents sleep with loaded pistols handy, and declare that if they catch the man prowling around their premises they will shoot him on sight.

TEDDY IS STUMPED FOR ONCE

By Associated Press.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 11.—Protests from Progressive leaders in all parts of the country against the proposal that Colonel Roosevelt run for governor of New York poured in on the former president today by mail and wire. Sufficient time has elapsed since the attempt of the New York leaders to win him last Wednesday to bring in letters from the South and West and in virtually every instance the demand was made that Colonel Roosevelt stay out of the race.

The situation which has arisen has given the Colonel more concern than almost anything else for it was plain he must go against either the virtually unanimous request of the men who head the party of this state or the equally definite opinions of the leaders of the other states. The Colonel determined today to let the riddle solve itself by keeping silent while the progressives all over the country had it out.

"WILD MAN" KNOWLES IS GOING TO REPEAT PRIMITIVE MAN STUNT

Joseph Knowles, who last year went into the Maine woods without clothing and came out in two months with some which he had made himself, as told by him in his book, "Alone in the Wilderness," left Chicago on his way to the Sierra Nevada mountains in California. He will seek to repeat his demonstration of living on food obtained without aid of other persons or weapons. This time he is so sure that nobody will see him while he is in seclusion that he will offer $500 reward if he is photographed.

STORSTAD HELD FOR DISASTER

By Associated Press.

Quebec, July 11.—The collier, Storstad, is held to blame for the Empress of Ireland disaster in the findings of the wreck commission handed down today. The commission holds the wreck was due to the Storstad's change of course ordered by the third officer without instructions from the first officer who was in charge of the collier at the time. The Empress was sunk in the St. Lawrence May 29 with a loss of more than a thousand lives.

The inquest into the disaster begun in Quebec June 16, by a commission composed of Lord Mersy, formerly presiding justice of the British Admiralty Court, Sir Adolphus Routhier, of Quebec, and Chief Justice McLeod, of New Brunswick.

ALL IS AGREED

Columbus, July 11.—Another important step towards complete agreement between Ohio coal operators and miners was taken today when miners' representatives, in conference here, ratified the proposed agreement for a scale of 67.6 cents on pick mined coal. The proposal of a rate of 47 cents on machine mined production was ratified last night. Several remaining minor points in the compromise proposals will be ratified, officials say.

GUAYMAS STORY WAS PREMATURE

By Associated Press.

Saltillo, Mexico, July 9.—via Laredo, July 11.—Previous reports that the port of Guaymas had been evacuated by Federals were in error, according to advices today from General Alvarado, commanding the Constitutionalists besieging the city. Alvarado reported that he had moved his forces so as to surround Guaymas completely on the land side.

COLD FINGER OF DEATH IS ON INGALLS

By Associated Press.

Hot Springs, Ark., July 11.—Melville E. Ingalls, 72, financier and railroad man, died here today of heart failure. Mr. Ingalls has been in his summer home here. Members of his family and friends say he has been gradually declining for months but his illness has been more marked during the last few weeks. Three days ago an ulcerated tooth and the shock of the treatment hastened his end. The body will be taken to Cincinnati tomorrow night on a special train and the funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday from the Unitarian church there. Burial will be made in the family plot in Cincinnati.

Besides the widow and daughter Mr. Ingalls is survived by four sons, Melville E. Ingalls Jr., and Fay, of New York; George H. Ingalls, of Chicago and Albert S. Ingalls, of Cleveland. No statement was made here today on behalf of the family as to the extent of the dead man's estate further than that there is a will.

It was said that he withdrew from all active business some time ago and disposed of many of his interests to those he wished to have them after his death. Until two years ago he was chairman of the board of directors of the Big Four Railroad, the line with which his name was most closely identified although he was a powerful figure in what generally is known as the Vanderbilt group of railroads. Besides his home here he had a home in Cincinnati and a new one in Washington. He was president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad from 1888 to 1900 and was democratic candidate for mayor of Cincinnati in 1903 and president of the National Civic Federation in 1905. He was also interested in banking in Cincinnati.

ACCUSES FAMOUS AMERICANS

Claims He Is in a Position to Produce Proof That Wilson, Roosevelt and Others Are Involved in the Alleged Conspiracy—On Way to the United States to Show Up the "Crime." Will Deliver Lectures.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 11.—Querido Moheno, former Mexican minister of commerce and labor, before departing for Cuba and the United States bitterly criticized the policy of the United States toward Mexico. As he sat in a forward saloon of the French liner Espagne, Senor Moheno looked through a porthole toward the American flag flying in Vera Cruz and shook his fist in rage.

The Mexican insisted that he is in a position to produce proofs that there exists a "secret platform" of the Progressive party in the United States, of which Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was cognizant and in which he concurred, looking to the disruption of Mexico and the acquisition ultimately by the United States of all the territory between the Rio Grande and Panama.

Moheno said that Francisco Escudero, who was minister of foreign relations in Venustiano Carranza's cabinet, has letters which to him are conclusive proof of the allegations, and declared he hoped to be able to produce these letters at the proper time. "And not only were the leaders of the Progressive party pledged to this policy," he added, "but politicians of both the Republican and Democratic parties had promised their secret support. That President Wilson had subscribed to this iniquitous conspiracy is evidenced by his attitude toward Mexico. Not a single American in all the 100,000,000 population of the United States can give a satisfactory answer as to why those troops are ashore at Vera Cruz."

To show up President Wilson's "crime" against Mexico, "the greatest in the history of modern nations," is the announced object of Senor Moheno's trip to the United States. He arrived here on the Espagne from Porto Mexico and said he would not go ashore during the liner's stay, as Vera Cruz is to him a disagreeable spectacle under the existing conditions.

Senor Moheno also announced that he would publish a book explaining his connection with Mexican political affairs since the tragic ten days and also deliver lectures. By these methods and through interviews in the newspapers, he said, he hoped to convince the American people of the enormity of the "crime committed not only by President Wilson but by all the political factors in the United States, regardless of party."

Senor Moheno added that he does not agree with the opinion that the oil interests are responsible for the revolutions in Mexico. On the contrary, he ascribed them to a greater power, namely, the government itself, as directed by its politicians. Neither did Senor Moheno have any hope, except of the slightest nature, that the overthrow of the government of Huerta by the Constitutionalists would be followed by peace.

In his denunciation of President Wilson, Senor Moheno resorted to much sarcasm, characterizing him as the "puritan president." Moheno frankly admitted belief that armed intervention in Mexico finally would come. He promised to reveal on his arrival in New York the exact method of the killing of the late President Madero and Vice President Suarez. "I will say now that I am confident General Huerta had nothing to do with the assassination of these men," he continued. "It was a political blunder and it was inevitable that it should result in a revolution which all thinking men now concede practically to have triumphed."

Hence the management of the forthcoming Chautauqua here are denied the pleasure of presenting him to our people on Farmers' Day, but they have done the next best thing in bringing here for that day Prof. Henry A. At the conclusion of his address Prof. Adrian conducts a question hour, when he will be glad to talk with farmers about their problems.

ARRESTS MADE IN CALIFORNIA

Held Violation of Army Regulation For a Civilian to Take or Publish Pictures of Any Fortification, Whether Complete or In Process of Construction—Men Released on Their Own Recognizance.

San Francisco, July 11.—Warrants for the arrest of Charles K. Field, editor of a magazine and former president of the Bohemian club; Robert J. Fowler, an aviator; Ray A. Duhem, a photographer, and Riley A. Scott, a writer, were issued at the request of John W. Preston, United States attorney here. The charge against all four is the disclosure of military secrets, and the penalty is ten years' imprisonment or a $10,000 fine for such disclosure if made abroad and one year or a $1,000 fine if made in the United States. They were released on their own recognizance.

In April the magazine published an article entitled "Can the Panama Canal Be Destroyed From the Air?" Reproductions of photographs taken from an aeroplane and showing some of the fortifications of the canal zone and of the San Francisco Presidio accompanied the text. As soon as a copy of the number was called to the

FIGHT IS ON IN EARNEST

Washington, July 11.—The administration leaders are busy and aggressive, preparing for the fight which is to begin Monday for the confirmation of the nominations of Thomas D. Jones and Paul M. Warburg to the federal reserve board. The first test of strength will come on the nomination of Mr. Jones. In allowing the Warburg nomination to remain in the committee for the present, the president's supporters are actuated partly by the hope that the New York banker may reconsider his refusal to appear before the committee and have his nomination considered on its merits, free from the question of assertion of the senate's constitutional right to attention of the war department if requested Preston to investigate.

Mr. Field's defense was that the photograph showed no actual fortifications, nor artillery, but only the emplacement for a gun and the preliminary work for a gun and the preliminary work for a fort.

To this Mr. Preston replied: "I think the case has merit. It has always been an army regulation with the force of law forbidding the taking of photographs of views of the permanent works of defense, whether in course of construction or completed. By the act of March 3, 1911, congress strengthened the regulation so that it is now a violation of a plain statute for a civilian to take or publish photographs of any fortification, whether complete or in process of construction. The war department regards the enforcement of this law as absolutely essential, and my instructions are emphatic in this case."

AT WASHINGTON

Washington, July 11.—The arrests at San Francisco marked the beginning of the first criminal prosecution under the national defense act of March 3, 1911, for disclosure of military secrets. The war department in the past has found it necessary to warn some publishers who printed special articles and pictures dealing with the coast defense system of the country, but because the element of intent to do mischief was lacking no attempt was made to prosecute the offenders. In the present instances, however, department officials pointed out, the publication specifically directed attention to alleged shortcomings of the defense system of the Panama demand information of the nominees. The administration senators have decided to force the fighting on the Jones nomination without delaying the matter. Mr. Jones is the president's friend. The president has appealed to the loyalty of all those senators on the Democratic side who call themselves administration senators.

JOHN LIND'S PAY CHECKS

Washington, July 11.—How much did the administration pay John Lind for his services in Mexico and for acting as adviser of President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan when the relations between the two countries were almost at the breaking point? This question is agitating Republicans and it is likely that in a day or so a resolution will be offered in the house calling on the secretary of state to indicate the amount paid Mr. Lind and whether he is still on the payroll. Representative James of California, a Republican critic of the administration's Mexican policy, is of the opinion that the secretary of state should make public the compensation of Mr. Lind and also let it be known whether Mr. Lind is still in the employ of the government.

ANARCHISTS IN DEMONSTRATION

New York, July 11.—There will be a "demonstration" by the "reds" in Union square this afternoon in memory of Arthur Caton, Carl Hanson and Charles Berg, the anarchist bomb victims. The Legislature Is Called.

Governor Cox has issued his call for a special session of the Ohio Legislature. The Ohio law makers will meet in Columbus on July 20—one week from next Monday—and according to the call of the chief executive will devote their time and their talents to so amending the tax laws of the state as to make them conform more nearly to existing conditions.

The Governor announces that a deaf ear will be turned to all importunities to submit requests for legislative action on subjects other than that of taxation.

The tremendous increase in the personal property duplicate which the Warnes law has produced makes certain, unless the arbitrary state levies are reduced, the production of more revenue than the state requires for the common school fund, the university fund and the sinking fund. The largely increased duplicate also insures, unless the levy of one-half of one mill for good road purposes is reduced, the production of more money for that purpose than the State Highway Department, as at present organized, can expend to advantage.

The condition which confronted Governor Cox, under the changed conditions which the Warnes law had brought about admitted of but one alternative.

Either the legislature must be assembled and the tax rate reduced or several millions of dollars of the people's money must be locked up in the state treasury or loaned out at a low rate of interest to the banks of the state.

The problem which the legislature of the state will be called upon to solve is a simple one and should be disposed of in short order, without injecting any suggestions designed merely to obstruct or to furnish political capital for opposing parties.

The question of taxation is not, properly, a political question and no legislator should seek to convert it into a vehicle upon which political parties or ambitious men can ride into power.

The question of taxation is one of business, pure and simple, and should be so dealt with by public officials.

There are already intimations that an attempt will be made to make political capital out of the taxation questions which the General Assembly will consider, but it is not likely that any real progress will be made by those who seek to obstruct.

The gravest danger which the proposal to enact legislation satisfactory to the rural communities and the smaller municipalities of the state will be encountered in the opposition of the larger cities to a restoration of the "interior limitations" of the Smith one per cent tax law.

This "interior limitation" is the one real safe guard which the rural communities can secure against an inequitable increase of tax receipts by tax spending budget commissions.

There are many of the larger cities, such as Cleveland, Dayton, Cincinnati and the like, imperatively demanding more tax receipts than the old limitation would permit them to gather and the larger municipalities really need more revenue.

Prophets are now predicting that opposition to a reduction of the state levy—good roads and all—will melt away and probably never attain the dignity which will justify discussion in the halls of the legislature and that the only serious obstacle encountered will be the opposition to the placing of an effectual check on greedy budget commissions.

The extra session will afford an excellent opportunity for every member to prove that he is above petty politics and realizes that the public servant these days should be controlled by higher ideals than mere political expediency.

Public service is no longer only an opportunity to make political capital and create political issues.

It means, if the public servant is to be rewarded with further political preferment or praise from his constituents, an honest consideration of the problems presented and a disposal of those problems on grounds which mean the most of good to the public.

Large Proportion of Citizens Who Don't Vote Responsible For Social Unrest

By Rev. HAROLD PATTISON, Washington Heights Baptist Church, New York

WITH money riding up and down Fifth avenue and poverty only a few blocks away it is a wonder to me that nothing more serious than raids upon churches attended by the wealthy has occurred. Of course none of us believes in breaking up a church service, and I am sure WE ALL HONOR DR. WOELFKIN AND HIS CHURCH in the manner they handled such a serious situation. But do not let us fool ourselves that such men as Bouck White are cranks. He is a HARVARD AND UNION SEMINARY GRADUATE AND NO FOOL. The Christian church will do well not to array itself on one side or the other too quickly.

THE DISTASTE OF PATIENT ENDEAVOR, THE DISINCLINATION ON THE PART OF MANY OF OUR BEST CITIZENS TOWARD CIVIC AFFAIRS, THE SPIRIT OF UNBELIEF AND THE LACK OF FAITH IN THE FUTURE—ALL THESE ARE FOES OF OUR NATION. IT IS TIME THAT MEN TOOK A DEEPER INTEREST IN THE AFFAIRS OF THE NATION AND IN CASTING THEIR BALLOTS ON ELECTION DAY. LOOK AT THE FIGURES OF THE LARGE PROPORTION OF CITIZENS WHO DO NOT VOTE. Poetry For Today

NOBODY KNOWS.

Nobody knows why the summer rose Droops and dies at the summer's close
And the vagrant wind its petals
brown
Scatters at will thro' the busy town
Ah, nobody knows!

Nobody knows why the summer goes
And the weary winter brings the snows;
And the houghs are bare and the birds are gone,
And the dreary days drag dully on—
Ah, nobody knows!

Nobody knows why the days disclose
Fears and follies and wants and woes—
And death and duty and pain and care
Scatter their shadows everywhere—
Ah, nobody knows!

Nobody knows why the spirit goes
And the lips grow dumb and the eyelids close;
And the world's desire and the world's unrest
Wake no more in the icy breast—
Ah, nobody knows!

Nobody knows why the day departs
And night brings shadows to skies and hearts
And finds the dreamer at set of sun
With a broken heart o'er task undone—
Ah, nobody knows!

Nobody knows? Ah, yes! Oh, yes!
And that One—God! We grieve and guess,
But He is clearer of sight than we
And He knows why that it comes to be—
Yes, somebody knows!

Suspicious.

A firm of notion dealers on the East Side had gone out of business via the bankruptcy court, and the attorney for the principal creditors was going through the accounts of the concern.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS

Three Dead and Property Wrecked In Scranton By Flood.

Scranton, Pa., July 11.—With three believed dead, hundreds homeless, thousands of dollars' worth of property damaged, Scranton and vicinity was visited by a cloudburst that will tie up most of the traffic on two or more railroads for three days, including the Lackawanna and the Delaware and Hudson. Bridges were swept away by the rushing waters and scores were rescued from the river by the police reserves.

The storm was accompanied by terrific thunder and lightning. Driven by a stiff wind the streets were soon flooded. The storm continued unabated for several hours. An hour after it had ceased, Roaring brook and the Lackawanna river began to rise with such rapidity that the water soon reached the front porches of the houses.

L. W. Stanton, Frank A. Butler, Ray Ellis and Frank Durkin were standing on the bank of Roaring brook when the raging water washed the ground from under their feet and they were swept into midstream. They clung to a tree that was floating down stream. Ellis was rescued three miles farther down, but the others are believed to have perished.

WAY BLOCKED BY DR. CARMAN

Freeport, N. Y., July 11.—The aim of District Attorney Lewis J. Smith is now directed at Dr. Edwin Carman in whose house Mrs. Louise Bailey was murdered ten days ago. The district attorney said that if Dr. Carman would consent to tell all he knows about the events directly preceding the murder, the mystery surrounding the tragedy would be cleared up in five minutes.

Dr. Carman has put several stumbling blocks in the way of the prosecutor's men, and even refused to let detectives examine his books, although he had previously agreed to do so. It has been planned to visit every woman patient on the doctor's books and ask her if she was one of the women in the office whether or not Dr. Carman and Mrs. Bailey were friends, or had met several or many times previous to the tragedy.

MINERS RATIFY THE AGREEMENT

Columbus, July 11.—So much of the miners' scale agreement as relates to the payment of 47 cents a ton for machine mined coal was formally ratified by 165 delegates representing the Jackson, Pomeroy, Crooksville and Hocking districts. That part which relates to the payment of 67.6 for pick mined coal will also be ratified today. It develops that a considerable number of the miners were instructed to vote against the 47 cent proposition and it required much argument and many consultations, it is said, to persuade them to indorse it.

FORTUNE FAVORS AKRON BALLOON

St. Louis, July 11.—The balloon "Goodyear," piloted by Captain R. A. Preston of Akron, O., won the coveted place in the drawing for starting position in the national elimination balloon race. This balloon will start last, and therefore will be considered as having an advantage in the race because of the greater lifting power of its gas, which will be under the heating rays of the sun for a longer time before the ascent than will the gas in the balloons that start earlier.

DIE IN WELL

Martins Ferry, O., July 11.—Alex Donko was asphyxiated and Pete Veranko is in a serious condition as a result of being trapped in a well they were digging. Veranko shot off a charge of dynamite and, on account of the smoke, signaled Donko to pull him to the surface. While doing so the bucket dropped and Donko jumped in and died while trying to save his companion.

TOLEDO CHARTER

Toledo, July 11.—Providing for the strict form of government policies by authority and responsibility centered in the mayor, with the safeguard of recall, the proposed new charter for Toledo is practically ready for submission to the voters. The final vote on the charter as a whole will be taken next Thursday.

SHACKS TO FALL

Columbus, July 11.—As a result of the local cleanup campaign, Chief Inspector Fleming of the state fire marshal's office reported that to date 230 buildings have been ordered torn down. This includes all classes of structures. Repairs have also been ordered on 137 buildings. Of the total number of buildings ordered torn down, sixty-four are in the central section of the city.

YOUNG ELOPER LANDED IN JUG

Cleveland, July 11.—The nuptial bliss of Johnny Hazerodt, eighteen, son of F. H. Hazerodt, head of a wholesale grocery house, and his bride, Edyth Jones, eighteen, was short lived. They were brought back by Mr. Hazerodt from London, Ont., where they were married July 3 after their elopement, and Johnny was sent to the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster and the bride went to her mother.

Henner Had a Way of Making the Louvre Officials See the Light.

It is a pity that Henner is dead. He had found an excellent means to force the conservators at the Louvre to bring down the pictures that he judged had been placed too high. He made use of this method in the case of "Susanne au Bain" ("Susanna at the Bath") of Tintoretto.

Twenty years ago this masterpiece was hung in the gallery four meters from the floor.

Henner was furious at this injustice. But he did not permit his anger to appear. He contented himself with coming from time to time in the morning before the visitors were numerous in the halls and in the most courteous tone requesting the keepers to furnish him a large double ladder.

The keepers referred the matter to the conservators, saying that this ladder was asked by M. Henner, and they were impressed with the necessity of responding to the wish of the old master.

Then he placed the ladder before Suzanne, mounted the steps slowly and, when at the top, remained a quarter of an hour absorbed in the contemplation of the marvelous painting.

He then descended as phlegmatically and, with a fine smile, said in his Alsatian jargon: "Merci pour l'effort. Je suis dres content!" ("Thanks for the ladder. I am much pleased!")

He went through this maneuver half a dozen times at intervals. At last the conservators understood. They had "Susanne au Bain" unhooked and gave it a place of honor in the square salon, where it is now.—Cris de Paris.

VISITING NURSE FINDS MUCH WORK IN THIS CITY

Work Not Confined to Care of Tubercular Patients, But Time is Divided up Among All Who Require Careful Attention—Finds Several Cases of Tuberculosis and Begins Her Work at Once—Comes Here From Nelsonville, Where She Found Much Suffering.

"Well, Sir, I've been so busy since I arrived in Washington Court House Monday that I've scarcely had time to think. I think I shall have plenty to do during my visit here." Miss Amy Mercer, the visiting Red Cross nurse who is to spend a month among Washington's sick, delivered this statement to a Herald interviewer Saturday morning.

Miss Mercer is a rather tall, attractive young lady, quiet of manner and with that soft and well modulated voice that is such a valuable asset to persons laboring among the sick. She is sent here by the Ohio Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and her services are free to all. Her visit is the result of the work of the Browning Club in disposing of the record number of red cross seals during the holidays last winter.

"My work is by no means confined to the care of tubercular patients," said Miss Mercer in answer to the query of the interviewer. While the principal object of the society is to prevent the spread of the white plague, the visiting nurse finds it among her duties to attend to all cases where her services are of value. The visiting nurse neither confines her work to any class of humanity. Rich and poor alike are welcome to her ministrations.

In speaking of tuberculosis and the proper care of tubercular patients, Miss Mercer said, "Many persons, in fact the majority, have a mistaken idea of the care necessary for the proper treatment of this disease. For instance it is a common mistake to believe that tubercular patient may be benefited by long walks in the early morning and similar exercises when the important thing is to keep the patient, who is nearly always affected with more or less fever, from exercising at all. Perfect quiet is essential. Another common mistake is the sending of patients into the West and to other climates calculated to improve the condition of the afflicted. This is wrong. Ohio is just as good a climate as any and the state society is making a powerful campaign just to impress this very fact. While I have not been here quite long enough to estimate the number of tubercular cases in Washington I have seen two and know of several more."

Miss Mercer said she would urge upon Washington people the necessity of sanitary conditions and said that she expected the health authorities to cooperate with her.

"This is a powerful factor, as all sensible persons have come to know, it is a lesson that cannot be repeated too often or impressed too deeply. It is especially necessary in homes where there are children. I am sorry I did not arrive in Washington before the schools closed as I find many cases of improper sanitation through the reports of teachers and the subsequent examination of children. Children should be taught to keep themselves neat and clean, should be given good wholesome food, allowed plenty of exercise and above all should sleep in rooms well ventilated and cleansed. I hope to find a number of cases where I may be of service."

Miss Mercer stated that in many places, as small or even smaller than Washington, the visiting nurse is coming to be recognized as an urgent and perpetual necessity and that one or more according to the need, is employed the year round and works in cooperation with the city health board.

During her month's stay here, which closes August 6, Miss Mercer will gladly attend all cases she may be able to handle and can be found at the home of Mrs. Margaret Caldwell on East Market street or through the officers of the Browning club.

Miss Mercer, whose home is in Cleveland, comes here after a month's stay in the mining village of Nelsonville, in Athens county, and her account of the suffering and poverty in that locality, which was recently affected by a strike among the miners, is pathetic and interesting.

HEATER CAUSES ALARM OF FIRE

An instantaneous heater in which the gas was burning freely, resulted in an alarm of fire being sent in and the department making a run to the home of Martin Cox, on Main street, Friday evening.

No damage was done, as the heater had not been beyond control any time. The department made a quick trip to the scene.

LOOKING FOR HUSBAND WHO LIVES AT AMANDA

Mrs. E. K. Lurch Arrives in City From Pennsylvania, and is Penniless—Formerly Resided Here Where She Attracted Much Attention by Wearing Thousands of Dollars Worth of Jewels—Claims She Gave Jewels to Sheriff of Franklin County to Give to Her Husband.

Claiming to be penniless and very anxious to locate her husband, a woman giving the name of Mrs. E. K. Lurch, a former resident of this city, appeared to the police Saturday afternoon, for aid in locating her husband and in reaching Amanda where she claims her husband resides, or did reside until a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Lurch is remembered in this city as formerly residing in the C. D. Hays property, corner Paint and North streets, and two years ago, while living here she attracted a great deal of attention by wearing diamonds said to be worth $9,000. She was visited frequently in this city by her husband.

Discussing her sad plight while at the Mayor's office Saturday afternoon Mrs. Lurch stated that three weeks ago she left her husband in Columbus under the care of physicians, and that she went to Washington, Pa., to be with relatives, but found upon her arrival that her relatives had died or moved away. She was penniless, according to her story, and a detective gave her $2. She then set out upon her return, and reached this city, stopping with her friends.

She further stated that before leaving Columbus she had placed her diamonds, worth, according to her own statement, $9,000, in the hands of the Sheriff at the place, to be turned over to her husband.

Since that time she has heard nothing from her husband, and has been unable to locate him. She was undecided what to do, but stated that she was going to find her husband if he could be found, and that she was not going to permit relatives standing in the way of her reunion with her husband.

She stated that she did not know the value of money, and that her husband had always kept her in luxury, but had usually kept her in some town other than Amanda. "I don't like Amanda," she said. "Why think of it! over there the men even wear their trousers tucked inside of

BARN IS BURNED BY THUNDERBOLT

A large barn belonging to a Mr. Bowers, and located on the Thompson farm near Edgely, was struck by lightning Friday afternoon and burned to the ground.

Practically everything in the barn was consumed. All live stock were removed in safety.

In some parts of western Jefferson township the hail created havoc and on the A. S. Bocco farm north of Octa one field of corn was cut to ribbons and damaged so that it will probably be worthless.

MANY FIELDS OF WHEAT DESTROYED

Within the last week or ten days six or eight fields of wheat along the railroads in this county have been either badly damaged or almost entirely destroyed by fire started by sparks from passing engines.

Probably the most destructive fire occurred Thursday on the Pinkerton farm near Bloomingburg, when a field of ten or twelve acres was almost completely burned over, and the wheat destroyed in the shock.

Four other fields between this city and Mt. Sterling have been swept by fire kindled from sparks thrown out by passing engines.

MEN STUNNED DURING STORM

Thunder Bolt Strikes Large Cattle Barn On Elias McCoy Farm East Of Town—Three Clouds Meet East of Town and Wind, Hail and Lightning Do Considerable Damage.

While the storm was in progress Friday afternoon a thunder bolt struck the large cattle barn on the Elias McCoy farm east of this city on the Circleville pike, and Mr. McCoy, Sherman Allison and another man were slightly stunned for a few moments. No serious damage was done.

Mr. McCoy and another man were driving within 30 feet of the barn when the bolt struck. Sherman Allison was inside the barn, and suffered more than the two men outside. Fortunately the bolt did not set fire to the barn.

When the bolt fell two or three men were approaching with loads of wheat, and a few minutes later would have been directly under the spot where the bolt fell.

The storm was unusually severe in the neighborhood of the McCoy farm, three clouds merging. The first storm came from the northwest, the second from the northeast and the third from the southeast.

The violent wind tore down many telephone poles and fences, blocking the roadway for some little time. Hail did quite a little damage to the crops east of this city, and the worst of the storm passed about two miles east of town, and southeast along the Chillicothe pike.

In Social Circles

Mr. and Mrs. George Greve gave a delightful garden party Friday evening, at their home east of town in honor of their guests, Miss Ethel Liefert, of Celina, and Mr. Sink, of Columbus.

Twenty-five Washington young people drove out in a hay wagon having a jolly ride, and found nearly as many guests of the neighborhood assembled.

The grounds were gayly decorated with Japanese lanterns and the evening made merry with out of door amusements.

Mrs. Grove served an appetizing lunch.

Miss Rose McLean gave a pleasurable little dinner Friday evening in compliment to Miss Katharine Kelley of Xenia. The additional guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howat, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Fullerton, Misses Dorothy Fullerton and Jean Howat.

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

Showing What a Genius Can Do With Crude Apparatus.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noo told me she wanted to be 'a whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrong we had done that day and confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to do; I did not take off the lower sheet on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my example in multiplication; all the other girls did theirs wrong, so I thought I would too.'"—Cor. Christian Herald.

Nuts as Food.

A judicious use of nuts has cured cases of indigestion by relieving the constipation which was the cause. Brazil and pine kernels particularly are rich in natural oil which gives warmth, keeps the digestive system clear and does much toward making the skin clear and healthy. Weight for weight nuts contain actually far more protein than bread. They are a safe food for all who have a tendency toward any form of rheumatism, and they are also beneficial in cases of mental strain and general "nerves."

THEY WERE WELL MATCHED.

Why the Ramseys Were Like Old Joe Murchison's Team.

"It seems strange that the Ramseys should have married each other," said Mrs. Pilman.

"Strange? Not at all, my dear!" replied her husband. "They are well mated—as well mated as old Joe Murchison's horses were."

"I don't know anything about Murchison's horses," said Mrs. Pilman. "but I know that Mr. Ramsey is big and handsome and indolent, and Mrs. Ramsey is always at work and is thrifty into the bargain."

"That bears out what I say, my dear," said her husband. "Let me explain. In that remote and 'dark ages' period of my life before I knew you they offered a prize at the annual fair for the best matched pair of agricultural horses. There were some beauties brought in, so that everybody laughed when old Joe Murchison came driving along a great, handsome, slow moving horse harnessed with a wiry, scrawny little beast that took two steps to the big fellow's one."

"That's a finely matched pair!" somebody shouted.

"So they be!" agreed Joe complacently. "So they be! The best matched pair in the county! One's willin' to do all the work an' t'other's willin' he should!"—Exchange.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his poem "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a procession of adjectives may be taken, at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wondrous" or regard him as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times in the twenty-eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not slight the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

Newspaper Reporters.

I have always had great sympathy for newspaper reporters—a class of men generally about equally feared and criticised. During a large part of my life since my graduation I have been brought in constant contact with the men of this profession. Only on rare occasions have I suffered at their hands serious injustice, due either to deliberate intent or to gross misunderstanding. I have generally found them courteous and considerate, honestly desirous of getting the truth and of reporting it accurately.—Abbott's "Reminiscences" in Outlook.

A Serious Fault.

"It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult. There isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia. I would esteem it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault."

"And what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

EMPEROR PENGUINS.

Very Ceremonious They Are With Their Bows and Speeches.

In Sir Ernest Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic" there is a chapter by James Murray, the biologist of the expedition, on those queer creatures, the penguins. The following is an extract:

"Their resemblance to human beings is always noticed. This is partly due to their habit of walking erect, but there are truly a great many human traits about them. They are the civilized natives of these regions."

"Emperor penguins are very ceremonious in meeting other Emperors or men or dogs. They come up to a party of strangers in a straggling procession, some big, important, aldermanic fellow leading. At a respectful distance from the man or dog they halt, the old male waddles up and bows gravely till his beak almost touches his breast. Keeping his head bowed, he makes a long speech in a muttering manner, short sounds following in groups of four or five. Having finished the speech, the head is still kept bowed a few seconds for politeness' sake, then it is raised, and he looks in your face to see if you have understood. If you have not comprehended, as is usually the case, he tries again. He is very patient with your stupidity."

"Their most solemn ceremonies were used toward the dogs, and three old fellows have been seen calmly bowing and speaking simultaneously to a dog, which, for its part, was yelping and straining at its chain in the effort to get at them."

One Bolted.

OLD BEN BOLT

The Prize He Won and What He Thought He Would Lose.

By MYRA NORTHCLIFF.

His name was not "Old Ben Bolt," but everybody called him that, and strangers accepted it on the spot as singularly appropriate, for Captain Jim Staybolt's honest, kind blue eyes, his brown face and closely curling hair and his masterful yet good natured mouth made him indeed seem the embodiment of the famous "Ben Bolt of the salt sea gale."

He wasn't old at all, though he thought himself aged and beyond all the dreams of youth because he had just turned thirty-five. But then he had always had an abnormal modesty about his own masculine charms.

His head, albeit of pepper and salt, was filled with practical good sense that had brought him up from fisherman to superintendent and part owner of the Grantson company's big fleet of snags.

He had his office in the cubby of a water stilled shanty at the end of the pier, and its window looked directly across at a certain young woman named Kate, dealing out candy, oranges and cheap cigars to the rolling crews of the boats.

There was a standing joke among the boys how the smoking habit took hold of everybody after he saw Kate.

It never got to her ears, though, for, notwithstanding the candy and cigars, there was a fine little line of reticence about the girl over which no one ever stepped, not even Hank Raynor, the vainest and most impudent fellow that ever trod a schooner's deck. But her pretty blushes and shining eyes gave the clew to her preference, and Ray-nor, who frequently consumed his entire wait buying a cigar, could not have been said to discourage the impression.

It is true the boys joked, but the majority of them swore as well, for the handsome Raynor bore no immaculate reputation among them.

"Guss it!" said Dick Pearsall, mate of the Osprey schooner, savagely one night. "Why is it a woman can never see an inch from her nose when she's daffy on a man?"

"Marryin' takes that out of 'em, though," laughed old Captain Brown, who was on honorable drydock after fifty years of cod and halibut.

"Marryin'!" sneered the mate of the dandy, well built snuck Lucinda V. "Marryin'! Raynor looks like a marryin' man, don't he? I ain't no masher myself, but I tell you that smartie is just tryin' to show off before us fellows. Marry her! Even if he wanted to he ain't fit to wipe her old shoes on!"

Nobody dissented. There were tongues in the fishing port that did not hesitate to declare that Raynor's skill as a fisherman was far inferior to the art with which he could wreck coasters for a living when the owners got tired of paying insurance and decided that it was time to collect some instead.

"All the same, he told me it was fixed up between 'em," insisted Captain Brown. "That's tellin', I s'pose, but he didn't say as there was anything private about it."

Unnoticed by the men, Captain Jim Staybolt had come up in time to catch the last words. He stopped a moment in the shadow of a column. When he moved on his face looked gray and drawn in the uncertain light.

"Get ready to take the Osprey and the Lucinda out next tide," he said evenly. "We'll have 'em unloaded in three hours more and ready for sea again."

He went back, and the group broke up. Pearsall as he turned caught a glimpse of his superior's face and wondered vaguely if "the boss" were ill.

With a fine sense of honor, Captain Jim himself had refrained from a look or word that might compromise Kate, but the memory of a chance touch of her fingers once when she passed back his change still sent a thrill over him. Since that day she had grown under his eyes to be the one desirable thing of his life.

He knew enough of Raynor to despise the man. Time and again he had all but prayed he might get actual cause for interference. Now the shattering of the dream seemed less his blunder than a crime.

A week afterward Kate's old father was struck by a falling block and laid on his bed, helpless for life. Her mother fell ill of typhoid. The superintendent saw the bloom fade from the girl's cheeks, to return only when Raynor appeared, and that in a nervous flush. He grew hot and cold alternately at the air of careless proprietorship the latter had lately assumed. Then suddenly the man announced that he was going away.

"Hank has got a ship," Captain Jim heard Kate confide to another girl. "It's a schooner running out of South Amboy for Norfolk, and the owners have promised him a raise in a few months, and then, if father and mother are able to be moved!"

Captain Jim lost the rest, but a sharp thrust went through him, whether of anguish or relief he could not have told. A month later came news of a shipwreck on the New Jersey coast.

The dispatches said openly that there were suspicious circumstances about the wreck, but as the captain, Hank Raynor, was announced as among those drowned it was impossible to do much investigating.

On that very day Kate failed to appear at the pier.

Day by day for a blank, wretched week Captain Jim faced the empty stand opposite his window. Then he went down to the waterside street and found there destitution, at once pitiful and reassuring.

"It isn't your love I am asking for, dear," he said to her gently as at the end of a half hour he found himself holding her trembling fingers and smoothing her hair. "I couldn't expect that. But if you will give me what is left, the right to take care of you and yours, God knows it will be a precious trust."

Captain Jim had no fine phrases, but months of effort had made him a marvel of self control. He stood quite still, though every nerve was tense with longing to clasp the slim little figure to his breast. In fact, he hardly dared breathe when at last Kate dropped her head against his arm for acquiescence and broke into soft sobbing. A guess at what was in his heart, he told himself, would have frightened her out of his reach forever. The six weeks that followed were a mixture of paradise and purgatory to him. It was hard, indeed, to play the decorous, fatherly lover when his whole soul cried out for the touch of her lips on his and every swish of her dress against his hip set his pulses throbbing.

But he did it, and well.

His paradise proved a fool's, however. Walking along the main street one evening, with Kate on his arm, Hank Raynor's unmistakable self passed the two almost at elbow touch. There was a vivid scar along the apparition's cheek. Kate did not see him, but a pang like death went through "Old Ben Bolt." The sight of that handsome, devil-may-care face seemed to sound his doom.

During the next four and twenty hours Captain Jim worked out his bitter problem. Cost what it might to his own self respect, he would tell Kate the truth as he knew it concerning Hank Raynor. He could do that if she had been his young sister, but in honor he must free her from her promise to himself.

He had thought of a way out of her financial difficulties, but it was not necessary she should know that yet or, indeed, the cost to his own heart of these last few months.

"I have come to give you back what I asked that first night, Kate, but I must tell you something it will be hard for you to bear," he said to her hoarsely as he stood in the little parlour, whose very plainness had grown dear to him.

A flush ran into Kate's cheek, but it died there, leaving a white line around her lips. "Old Ben Bolt" gripped the back of the chair in front of him.

"I suppose you have seen Raynor?" he went on.

Kate's color rushed back in a rosy flood. Her eyes drooped for an instant; then, shy, but brave, they looked straight into Captain Jim's own.

"Yes, I have seen him and—his wife," she answered with a little laugh. "He brought her from Philadelphia. It—it was a good thing I had found out before that—that I didn't care most for him, after all, wasn't it, you dear 'Old Ben Bolt'?"

The room reeled round Captain Jim. Out of its chaos Kate's face grew flushed and smiling still, but with suspiciously luminous eyes. Then did this "Ben Bolt" give a great gasp as the truth burst upon him. He took two long strides with outstretched arms, and a second later Kate was quite lost in the big, warm embrace her dark hair had taught her was her heart's true haven.

Domestic Discipline.

"I told my boy that if he was careful of his behavior I'd take him to a ball game."

"Sometimes," replied Mr. Comrox, "I think that a boy is a greater comfort than a girl. My daughter told me that if I didn't show more culture she'd make me go to another classical concert."—Washington Star.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Neuritis.

Neuritis, which is inflammation of a nerve, may be either acute or chronic, and sometimes an acute attack passes into a chronic form. The chief symptom of neuritis is pain in the affected nerve. Sometimes the patient describes the pain as "burning," sometimes as "shooting" or "darting," and sometimes as "boring." Movement makes it worse, and it is generally more severe at night. Cases that can be traced to some slight injury are likely to get well, but a chronic case may persist for many months. When neuritis is the result of a direct injury to a nerve surgical treatment may be necessary. If the nerve has been divided by a wound it must be brought together and sutured. If it is pinched or compressed by a tumor or an abscess or a piece of fractured bone it can be relieved only by surgery. In all cases the treatment of neuritis must include great care for the general health, absolute rest for the affected part and relief for the wearing pain. Sometimes the sick nerve can be kept at rest by a bandage or a sling. If it cannot be helped in that way the patient may have to go to bed. Massage is not advisable while the inflammation is high, but is often of service in the later stages of the trouble.

IRVING'S HEAD.

Why the Spot That Washington Touched Could Not Be Seen.

Among Dr. George Haven Putnam's early recollections was a meeting with Washington Irving. He tells of it in his "Memories of My Youth." The Irving home was near Yonkers and the Putnam family occasionally visited their neighbors. Dr. Putnam remembers one Sunday afternoon when his father was busy arranging some of Mr. Irving's papers and the old gentleman took pains to give him some word about his own childhood. "His mother told him some years later, when he was old enough to be interested in historical events and personages, that when he was a year old the nurse, taking him out in his baby carriage, saw at the corner of Broadway General Washington passing by on horseback. The nurse, holding up the little boy, called out to the general that here was a boy that had been named after him, and she hoped that the general would be willing to give the boy his blessing. "Little Washingtons were not so plenty in 1784 as they became in later years, and the general was quite ready to delay his ride for the purpose of giving a greeting to his little namesake. He took the boy up on the saddle and, placing his hand upon the little one's head, gave him a formal blessing. I looked up with interest at the head that had been touched by Washington, and then found myself perplexed at Mr. Irving's word that I should not see the spot on which the general's hand had rested. "I spoke to my father afterward about the incident, and he said, 'Why, you stupid, don't you know that Mr. Irving wears a wig?'"

The Provençal Tongue.

Mistral, the great Provençal poet, has been likened to Robert Burns for the work he did. But Burns' task was child's play compared with Mistral's. The Scottish poet found his language fully grown and completely alive; Mistral had to create his means of expression. Provençal had lost every resemblance to a literary tongue, and the new poet-patriot had to mold it afresh, to recreate and to build up on the ruins left by the vineyard and the farm. "Our Provençal," said Mistral, "was a country lass, ragged and wild." She is now a wonderfully beautiful creature, but it is doubtful whether all the genius of Mistral can keep her alive. The educational reformer in France does not like such irregular beauty.—Chicago News.

MAY CONSOLIDATE ANTI-TRUST BILLSSenators Would Expedite Completion of Wilson's Program.*COMMITTEES HARD AT WORK

Determined to Perfect the Administration Measures by Monday If Possible—Important Amendments Added to the Trade Commission Bill—Sherman Act to Stand as It is on the Statute Books.

Washington, July 11.—Determined to perfect the administration anti-trust bills by Monday if possible, the senate judiciary and interstate commerce committees are laboring long and earnestly.

Considerable sentiment in favor of consolidating the three anti-trust bills is developing in the senate and some senators said that this might be done when the measures reached the floor next week. The main purpose for such action would be to expedite completion of the trust legislative program.

The interstate commerce committee succeeded in perfecting the interstate trade commission bill, already before the senate, adding two important amendments and determining not to amend the questioned section 5, in which unfair competition is declared unlawful. The amendments to the commission bill agreed to by the committee provide:

That no order of the proposed trade commission for or against a corporation shall be used as evidence in any subsequent prosecution brought against a corporation under the Sherman law.

That nothing in the act to create the trade commission shall be construed as amending the Sherman act, nor in any way affecting the provisions of the act as it stands on the statute books.

STEPS IN HISTORY

One hundred and sixteen years ago today the United States Marine Corps came into existence by act of Congress. This act marked the reincarnation of that gallant body of Continental Marines who won the first fight in the history of the regular navy on the island of New Providence in the Bahamas at the beginning of the American Revolution. They fought the British tars all through the war, manning the "Long Toms" which poured the frightful broadsides, while the American soldiers handled the sails of the privateers. When peace came, they, like all other branches of military service, were retired by the Continental Congress.

The modern marines took their places when war with France threatened the United States in 1798. The act establishing the corps provided for 720 privates, 129 officers and 32 drummers and fife players. Clad in uniforms similar to those of land soldiers, they roved the seas in all parts of the earth. They supported the flag in the War with Tripoli. They fought gallantly in the war of 1812, and waged war against the Mexicans both aboardship and as a part of the land army under General Scott. They won gallant distinction on land and sea in the American Civil War.

Today there are 10,267 officers and enlisted men in the United States Marine Corps. In these days of peace they are guarding the millions of dollars worth of property in the United States' navy-yards, naval stations and arsenals. They are scattered about the earth wherever the American flag is flying—in the Philippines, Hawaii, Guam, Porto Rico, and the Panama Canal Zone.

Today they are watchfully waiting the outcome of the situation in Mexico. They form at least 8 per cent a regulation of the navy so providing, of the crew aboard all battleships and first class cruisers. While fraternizing sociably with the sailors they are the official "police" of the ship, having authority to enforce regulations and order. In times of war, they are the first soldiers to land on foreign shores, frequently in the face of deadly fire. They were the first to brave the fire at Vera Cruz, in Nicaragua in 1912, and at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in 1898.

The modern marine is equipped with the latest invented implements of war. They are trained to transport and operate the wireless telegraph and telephone, portable searchlights, submarine mines and torpedoes, rapid fire guns and light artillery.

Of Great Price.

The lion had been teased and provoked by an ill conditioned keeper until his patience was quite spent. The enraged beast leaped upon the fellow, knocked him down and fetched him such a blow on the head that his skull was crushed like an eggshell.

"That means the end of you, you majesty," sniggered the jackal in the next cage.

"It would, old night prowler, if I were a mere man," replied the lion, licking a bloody paw, "but you forget that I cost $5,000."

The surviving keepers came, soothed the costly creature with a quarter of fresh beef and hastily removed the body of their comrade from the cage.—New York Post.

Conclusive.

Two Pullman porters representing different railroads met off duty and progressed from friendly gossip to heated argument. Their quarrel centered about which one worked for the better road. Their claims, figures and arguments came fast and furious. At last the tall, thin porter settled the dispute with these classic words: "Go on, niggers; we kills mo' people den you fellows tote."—Argonaut.

METHODISTS DROP FROM FIRST PLACE

A hard fought and interesting match marked the fall Friday of the Methodists nine of the Sunday School Baseball League into second position while their victors, the Baptists, assumed the first honor position in the pennant race.

White and Turner, battery of the Baptists, worked well throughout the game and the fielding was exceptional. Jones and Lloyd constituted the firing squad for the vanquished and while Jones twirled a good, steady game, his field support was his undoing. The final score was 10 to 3.

The league standing follows:

Teams	Games	Won	Lost	Pct.
Baptist	4	3	1	.750
Methodist	2	1	1	.500
Christian	4	2	2	.500
Presbyterian	4	1	3	.250

The next game will be Tuesday afternoon between the Baptists and Presbyterians, and leaders and tail enders, and is expected to be a warm one.

THOUSANDS OF YOUNG RABBITS

Sportsmen are looking forward with anticipation of good hunting in Fayette county the coming fall and winter, owing to the large number of rabbits reported from every part of the country.

The season has been unusually well adapted to the young rabbits, with the result that they are scattered throughout the country by the tens of thousands.

One automobile driver states that during a short trip one night recently he counted 17 rabbits as they scurried across the road in front of his machine.

Quail are more numerous than for years, and as they will again be protected the coming winter, they will increase many times the present number before Mr. Hunter can use his fowling piece upon them.

GOOD WHEAT YIELD QUALITY TIP TOP

Elton Marine, residing south of this city, reports one of the best wheat averages in the county today. He has threshed 75 acres which averaged 27 1/2 bushels to the acre, and tested from 60 to 62 1/2 pounds to the bushel, which is regarded as extraordinary.

Ellis Hays, residing on the Lewis pike, reports 120 acres with an average above 20 bushels to the acre.

Large quantities of wheat still pour into the elevators and the quality still remains much above the average, and the yield more than expected. The price still remains 73 cents per bushel.

MUST MAKE ROOM FOR NEW OFFICES

Within a short time the problem of providing offices for the County Superintendent of Schools, will be taken up by the County Commissioners, and the offices will, in all probability be located on the first floor of the Court House, probably in the southwest wing.

HORNBECK FUNERAL AT SOUTH SOLON

The funeral services of J. H. Hornbeck, who died suddenly at his home in Bookwalter, Thursday night about 10:00 o'clock, will be held at South Solon, Sunday morning at eleven o'clock and interment will be made in the South Solon cemetery.

The deceased leaves a widow and many other relatives who mourn their loss. A short time ago Mr. Hornbeck's brother died at South Solon.

TWO GOOD YIELDS ARE REPORTED

Mr. John L. Barnes, of Milledgeville, reports 55 acres of wheat averaging 30 bushels to the acre.

Mr. Joe Greiner had 25 acres of wheat averaging about 30 bushels to the acre.

So far these are the two largest yields reported in the county this season.

Who can beat them?

EAGAN, THE BOMB MAN.

No One Else on Earth Has a Job Just Like This New Yorker.

Owen Eagan, as inspector of New York's bureau of combustibles, has opened, analyzed and destroyed over 5,000 bombs in nineteen years of uninterrupted and dangerous duty. He receives a salary of $1,500 a year, and no one has ever offered to succeed him when he quits. No life insurance company will take a risk on him, and if he is injured while opening a bomb he cannot sue the city for damages. There isn't another job like his in the world. Following is an extract from an article in the American Magazine:

"The 'bomb industry' in New York began to be a serious menace ten years ago, but in those days Eagan had an hour or two to himself. Nowadays bombs are coming so fast he calls up the bureau of combustibles every half hour to let one of the three bosses know where he is. To show the increasing popularity of Black Hand extortion, Eagan handled only thirteen bombs in 1908, while last year there were 145, with a property damage estimated at $17,430, an increase of ninety-three over 1912.

"And every one of the unexploded bombs found is capable of blowing Eagan to smithereens were it not for the care he takes to safeguard his life. Once he has literally picked a bomb apart and has supplied the police with working clues he unconsciously finds himself the enemy of the very men who make bombs. Yet, cognizant of that fact, he carries no revolver for protection, and the only means he uses to elude the vengeful is to keep his whereabouts secret. You won't find his name, address or telephone number in any directory, and long ago he discarded the use of mail boxes."

The Single Thought. Stella—Were you two sons with but a single thought? Bella—That was just the trouble; he wanted to stay single.—New York Sun.

MYSTERY OF THE EEL.

Just How Its Existence Ends, or Why, No One Seems to Know.

Of all the forms of fish science has studied the eel is the most remarkable and the least understood. Its life history is mysterious and as slippery as its own skin.

Its breeding grounds are the mid-Atlantic, at what depth nobody knows. During the year the larval eel remains at sea it never eats and grows constantly smaller. It finally starts swimming toward the mouth of some fresh water stream—often one that is a thousand miles away.

On arrival at its destination the eel promptly changes from the thinness of a visiting card and a transparency that permits only its glistening black eyes to be seen to the pigmented snakelike fish that is trapped and speared on the coast and in the rivers.

As soon as the eel has brought forth its first spawning of 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 eggs it dies, but just how its existence ends or why it should be cut off so short remains a mystery. One thing is certain, no adults come in from the sea, no adults remain in the streams.

The eel is a vertebrate animal which emerges from an egg less than one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter. It grows to a length of three inches in perhaps a year, and during that time is buffeted about on the high seas and drifts over a distance of 1,000 miles or more.

Yet during all this period the eel takes no food whatever and is doubtless incapable of doing so, owing to the unprepared condition of its digestive organs.—New York American.

CURIOUS MULTIPLICATION.

You Need Not Know the Table Beyond "Two Times Nine."

What! Multiply 343 by 177 without knowing the multiplication table beyond the "two times nine?" Yes. If you can multiply and divide by 2 you can get any product in the following simple way:

Put down the two numbers side by side and form a column under each by successively dividing by 2 in the first column and doubling the number in the second column. Discard all remainders as you divide and carry both columns in even rows until the last quotient is 1. Then cross out every line across the three columns that has an even number in the first column, add what remains in the second column and you have the product. In the following columns the numbers in parentheses are the ones to be discarded:

85	708	4
(42)	(1,416)	(8)
21	2,832	16
(10)	(5,664)	(32)
5	11,328	64
(2)	(22,656)	(128)
1	45,312	256
	90,711	343

The reason why this comes out so nicely may be explained by means of a third column, showing the successive powers of 2. The powers standing in the uncrossed lines will exactly account for the remainders that were rejected. Their sum is therefore equal to the multiplier, 343, and opposite each is the partial product equal to 177 times the corresponding power of 2.—Youth's Companion.

Your Congressman's Politics

Of course you know it, but do you know the politics of every other congressman in Ohio? Of every state senator and representative? Do you even know the names of them all? Isn't it possible that the information might be useful to you some day? And don't you think you'd like to know anyway? Or at least be able to look it up easily if you wanted to?

It takes less than one minute to find those names and the districts, and the party to which the men belong, in our 1914 OHIO ALMANAC, just issued.

And if you are not interested in the people who represent you and make most of the laws that govern you, there are 100,000 other facts that you WILL be interested in to be found in this splendid HANDBOOK, and all found with equal facility. There is not another book published which provides such source of information for you. If you don't own an Ohio Almanac you will have to go to the complicated original sources to find those things, just as we did to compile this book for you.
